Base mouldings are used to enhance the area where your wall joins your floor. This item also joins your casing at a 90 degree angle. The base moulding generally is slightly thinner than the casing, allowing a more finished look. You can also use Plinths to help make the transition between the base and casing. The base moulding gives the room an impression of solidity, while protecting the walls from kicks, vacuum cleaners, furniture scrapes and bumps. Other terms that describe this moulding include baseboard or base trim. No matter what term you may use, base mouldings have been used in almost every room of every home that has been built since the 18th century. Influenced by the architectural design of the Greek and Roman periods. Base moulding not only serves function, but appearance as well.

Chair rails have both a decorative and practical function. Applied to a wall anywhere from 24 to 48 inches from the floor, they are a beautiful accent to the room, running horizontally to form a wainscot look.

The practical application is that they can be positioned to prevent items from hitting your wall and damaging the finish. Esthetically, they serve to make rooms appear larger by making a break between the upper and lower part of the wall. Chair rail mouldings come in many different styles. Some of the more popular styles are Egg and Dart, Reeded, Rope and Pearl mouldings. Architectural Enhancements carries many different styles to accommodate almost any situation.
